We have information that several places it
Rock Island County have been recently visite

The Attorney for Healey sends us a long communication explaining the history of his levy on the steam fire engine horses. But as he throws no new light on the subject, and contradicts in no material particular the account we gave of the matter, we deem it useless to lumber our columns with it. He says that Mr. Word. by a deaf and dumb young woman cannot be act in the capacity of agent for procuring subscriptions for the Parss AND TRIBUXE. Several parties who state that they have paid sums of money to her, complain that their papers have not come to hand. We have no such agent, and she is not more unfortunate in her real or presents in the capacity of the choice of swindling for a profession. The safest way to as with it. He says that Mr. War our columns with it. Its says has the word told him the city had no money; but that be would give him a treasury order bearing 10 per cent, to be paid when the taxes were collected. PLUCKING A VERDANT.—A man named B. S. Robbins was arrested Sunday night upon the complaint of one Smith from Desplaine, charging him with larceny of money. Smith alleges that on Saturday night Robbins took him to a free concert where he got him drunk, from thence to a brothel, finally winding up at Stanwix Hall, where he alleges Robbins took $5 away from him. The case was continued for further examination, Rôbbins being requested to give bail in the sum of $500 for examination.

Probably Twenty-three Lives Lost.

We are fearful that this disaster, a brief ne-count of which we gave yesterday, will prove even more melancholy than we then stated. The report by telegraph that five survivors had ar-rived at Port Sarnia, seems to be unfounded, the last reports from there being that no such persons had arrived at that port.

We gather from the Detreit and Port Huron papers, full particulars of this disaster, as de-tailed to them by the three survivors, Marcus Lake the first mate, J. C. Barton the second en-gineer, and George Plimley, the wheelman. These men, as our former account stated, took a leaky boat, but were finally driven ashore, it. Among the rest was a lad named Jacobs, whose father resides at 17 Clinton street. After riding a few rods, he was either pushed or jumped off just as an omnibus came along, and landed directly in front of the horses, which knocked him down, and the omnibus passed directly over his abdomen. He was taken up and carried into an apothecary store, and a physician examined his hurt, but could not determine as to the real character of his injuries. The lad was taken by R. M. Gullford, Esq., to his father's house. He is suffering severe pain, and it is probable he has received serious internal injury, although it is hoped he may recover. An incident connected with the above deserves to be mentioned, as eminently creditable to all parties. Upon the accident being made known at the great Sabbath School gathering at Metropolitan Hall, on the way to which the casualty occured, a collection was taken up amounting to over seven dollars, which was These men, as our sormer account stated, took as leaky boat, but were finally driven ashore, after being at the mercy of the waves for ten hours, at or near Goderich. The Aar Parsenvarive.—The boarders of the Widow Biggs were assembled for vesper feeding time. A warm mild perfume penetrated the front entry and settled itself contentedly down in the sitting room. That fruity odor had followed the flight of the weeks since rhubath and green gooseberries came in. First and earliest the Biggs family mansion was redolent of currants yielding their juices to the furtherance of the supply of shelved condiments, and successively tomatoes, peaches, and crab apples followed, all in accordance with the rules of the domestic art preservative.

The boarders of the Widow Biggs noticed it, and it provoked remark. So many weeks successive exhalation of the preserving kettle was noticeable. On this occasion Muggins spoke first and stated his conviction that the Widow Biggs had become converted into a life preserve. The Court held in each case that the Constitution of the United States conferred upon Congress the sole and exclusive right to logislate on the reclamation of fugitives, and that all State laws, either assisting or impeding the operation of the laws of Congress, were inoperative and void.

It is well known in the southern part of this State that a gang of men, under the lead of the Sheriff and County Judge of Union County, and the late Postmaster of Jonesborn, have organized a system of kidnapping, which they pretend to carry on under the obsolete fifth section of the "black laws." We repeat the suggestion now, in the hope that it will ap presention now, in the hope that it will ap presention only in the hope that it will ap present in a more Christian and charitable harding it than it was then. And we are impelled the the American Catholic world. We printed yesterday a letter from Rev. O'Flaherty, of Crawfordsville, Ind., who defends the dogma of the Immaculate Conception and sells cheap in dulgences in that place, in which an association of genthemen, animated by the holiest motives and doing incalculable good, is virulently as sailed. We speak of also Children's Aid Society of New York; and our readers will remember the comment which the assult upon it called forth. We cannot expect that the Relief Society or the Ministry-at-Large (Unitarian) of Chicago, will excel that Society in the good which it accomplishes, or that either will shame its managers in the purity of the philanthropy by which they are prompted. If, then, Protest and country elsewhere be received with such curses, what guaranty have we, that for every loaf of bread, every loaf of wood, every pound of meat, flour or tea, every rag of clothing and every pair of shoes, given to the Catholic poor of this city, the givers may not get a maledic.

WHERLOCK'S FAPER MILL.

On the Water Power, just above Deere & Co., S. W. Wheelock is just completing one of the most aplendid paper mills in the country. The building is a massive stone structure, one hundred and fifty-five feet in depth by thirty in width, and three stories high. In front there are three noble rooms, one hundred feet by thirty. The rear of the building forms an L, which gives three rooms, et horty feet by seventy. Thus in effect there are two mills, since in these suites of rooms are two machines, resectively for wfitte and wrapping paper. The former is a costly Fourdriviner machine, of a capacity to turn out 2,500 lbs per day. The wrapping paper machine is the one in former use in the old paper mill, and can turn out 1,800 lbs per day. The motor is equal to one hundred and twenty-five horse power, and drives, with these machines, seven engines for preparing the pulp. The boiler and bleach rooms are most complets and convenient. At an outlay of $35,000, Mr. Wheelock has secured a mill that one would need to go far and wide to find its equal. He has been ten years in the business, seven years at Moline, and the improvements in his mill are the result of his own still and experience, coupled with an intelligent watchfulness of all that is progressive in paper manufacture.

Sickels is more recently from Boston, whence he brings an excellent business reputation and experience, and adds strength to the firm. Their mill is a six story wooden structure, thoroughly appointed and fitted throughout for merchant milling, of a capacity of two hundred and fifty barrels per day. The senior partner is a most thoroughly experienced practical miller, and has secured one of the best mills in the Northwest, and for its products a high reputation in market, their brands in Chicago slaways commanding quick and high figures. They are putting their mill in complete order to recommence with the opening of the water power. It is of importance to the West that such establishment as the Moline Mills should be more numerous. A wheat producing region, it has too generally neglected the attainment of high perfection in the manufacture of its breadstuffs.

Everywhere in this country the Moline plows are distinged their way. Deere & Co. have now at Moline a monster establishment, temporarily driven by steam until the water power is completed.

Mr. Deere has been making plows at Moline since 1845. He now employs about eighty met, and turns out with his present capacity fifed thousand plows per cursues, of twenty Mifferent kinds. The Insurrection and its Lessons to Bemocratic Advocates of the Slave Trade.

To the Editor of the New York Times:

There could hardly be a stronger argument against the re-opening of the slave trade than has been furnished by the event of the last week at Harper's Ferry, and westnessly commend it to the attention of the fanatics who have been uproarlously definanting for the last week at Harper's Ferry, and westnessly commend it to the stention of the fanatics who have been uproarlously definanting to compelled the prosperity of the South. If anything could convince a sensible man that the South has quite negroes enough for its comfort, if not for its safety, it would be the uproar ereated by "old Brown's" insurrection. If we pride ourselves upon anything, it is upon the s lidity of our political system, upon our indifference to the plots of conspirators and the ravings of visionaries. We are always, and with reason, making merry over the throes of alarm in which the despotic governments of older countries are constantly plunged, over their sensitiveness to the smallest indication of discontent, over the convulsions into which they are thrown by the smallest riot or outbreak.

We mock at these fears of Kaiser and King, and glory in our own security. But see the exhibition we have made of ourselves daring the

The ditch is three feet wide on bottom, and two feet deep, the sides alooping one fourth to one, affording a section of 1008 square inches. Should necessity require it, in the future it can be enlarged with very little extra labor. The velocity of the water will be about four miles per hour, thus furnishing more than 255 millions cubic inches of water per hour. The principal reservoir is elevated nearly 2000 feet above the point where the water will enter the north fork at Clear Creek.

Garibaldi Hevisiting Old Scenes.

Gen. Garibald has just come back from the Cattolica, where he had gone to inspect the troops. Whilst at Ravenna the General made an excursion through the famous forest of the Pints, amongst whose shrubs and ancient trees he had sheltered himself and his unhappy wife, when, after the fall of Rome, he was hunted by the Austrians. You will no doubt remember how, ever since the times of Honorius, the aliuvial deposits of the Po have accumulated on the coast of Ravenna, how the port of Augustus has been gradually filled up, and the forest of piness, which once supplied the Roman fleet with timber, has spread farther until it has usurped the site where that fleet formerly rode at anchor, and has stretched along the shorest is more renowned for classical and poetical associations; it has been alluded to by Dante, Boccaccio, Dryden and Byron, and one part of it still retains the name of the Vicolo del Poeti, from the radioin that it is the spot where the author of the "Inferno" loved to meditate. Indeed, at Ravenna he died, and was buried. Not far from that alley which slopes down towards the sea, on a according summer day, in 1848, the brave defender of Rome, who had failed in an attempt to sail to Venice, sadly carried to its last resting-place the body of his dying wife. She had been wrecked with him on the shores of that it deless ase. On the error frendering him the father of a third child, the poor woman went through all the hardships of that storny voy age w the day he lost the mother of his children.

A Child Found Dead.

On Wednesday a party of men who were out bee hunting, found in Codar Lake, near Monee the dead body of an infant, which evidently had been murdered. A silk handkerchief had been torn into strips, one end tied around the child's neck and a large stone tied to the other, and then thrown into the lake, some distance from the shore, where the water was three or four feet deep. An inquest was held, and as we have been informed, the following facts were clicted. Some time in July a servant girl named Martin, living in the family of a Mr. Ray of Wilmington, who has heretofore sustained a good reputation, became enciente, as he asserts, by Ray, and was sent by him to Monee, and placed in the charge of a respectable German family, kay, and was sent by him to Monee, and piaced in the charge of a respectable German family, to be taxen care or, one gave until to a neutring to make third. Most Revered John Hughes, D. D., Archbishep, dc.:—
Most Revered Sir.—It is now nearly ten years since, under your auspices, I land down my ministry in the Frotestant Episcopal Church to submit myself to the Church of Rome. The interval, as "on know, has not been idlyspent, each day has had its responsibility and duty, and with these have come experience, observation and the knowledge of many things not so well understood before. The result is that I feel I have committed a grave error, which, publicity made, should be publicly repaired. When I came to you, it was, as I stated, with a deep and conscientious conviction that it was necessary to be in communion with the .See of Rome; but this conviction I have not been able to sustain, in face of the fact that by it the natural rights of man and all individual liberty must be saurificed—nor only so, but the private conscience often violated, and one forced, by silence at least, to what is opposed to moral truth and justice. Under these circumstances, when I sall to mind-how slander is the foundation in the earliest ages of the Church upon which has been reared the present Papal power, I can no longer regard it as legitimately imposing upon me or any one else. I do now, therefore, by this act, disown and withdraw myself from its alleged jurisdiction.

in in supposed, will reveal all the socrets of the conspiracy. Among the documents and in it stready are a Constitution of Gormanent that reads as if the old fellow companied a general overturn of the United tates, and the substitution of a new society; letter from Frederick Douglass, the fugitive lave, enclosing a ten dollar subscription by a day to some purpose: and a day of Some purpose: Smith's, for $100, designed to essist Brown in some way which is not yet explained. Other letters were said to be in the bag, which will doubtless be produced in due time and an effective manner. Governor wise, in whose possession they are, knows what damage can be done by the timely production of private correspondence, and is therefore well qualified to act discreetly in the premises.

We have no acquaintance with Brown, and are not aware what his epistolatory or literary tastes may have been, but we presume that in NEW WORK

We have no acquantance with Drown, and are not aware what his epistolatory or literary tastes may have been, but we presume that in attempting so bold an invasion of Virginia he fortified himself with the best Virginia opinion. If his object was to justify an emancipation of attempting so bold an invasion of Virginia he fortified himself with the best Virginia opinion. If his object was to justify an emancipation of the slaves, one of the most effective means for the purpose would have been a record of the known aontiments of the statesmen whom Virginia delights to honor. He probably took with him, the will of Washington, wherein he emancipates his slaves and forbids their sale or transportation; his letter of March 17, 1792, to Charles Pinckney, against the alave trade; his letter to Lafayette, of April 12th, 1786, expressing a wish to see slavery abolished, and his letter to Lafayette, of April 12th, 1786, expressing a wish to see slavery abolished, and his letter to Mr. Whipple, of Portsmouth, N. H., against creating any disturbance in order to arrest a fugitive. He probably carried with him Jefferson's "Notes on Virginia," in which he deprecates the debasing influence of slavery upon the manners of the people—his numerous letters in which he declares himself unalterably opposed to the institution—and his project of 1785 for the emancipation of slaves, to say nothing of the Declaration of Independence. And so the sentiments of Washington and Jefferson, Brown has likely added those of Patrick Henry, John Randolph, St. George Tucker, James Monroe, and other illustrious sons of the Old Dominion, with which our readers are familiar.

Nothing in these, it is true, would give sons of the Old Dominion, with which our readers are familiar.

Nothing in these, it is true, would give countenance to the insane career of violence and bloodshed which he proposed to himself, any more than there is in the similar teachings of the Anti-Slavery men of the North. More operative and inflammatory still would be the debates of the Virginia Legislature of 1832 following the Southampton insurrection of the progress, were These Recommender.

be the debates of the Virginia Legislature of 1832 following the Southampton insurrection of the previous year. These Brown must have studied. He contemplated a similar movement, and he doubtless desired to learn, not only the extent and result of that, but the feelings of the leading people in regard to its causee and meaning. We venture to say, therefore, that a copy of those debates, which have been published in pamphlet form, will be found among the contents of the mysterious carpet-bag. We venture to say that Marshall's arguments were in his mind, which proved that "Slavery is ruinous to the "whites," retards improvement, roots out an industri "ous people, banishes the yeomanry of the "country, and deprives the spinner, the weaver, the smith, the shoemaker, the carpenter, "of employment and support. It is an evil "that admits of no remedy. It is increasing," and will con time to increase, until the whole "Sir, you may place the slave where you clease—you may dry up to the uttermost, the ountains of his feelings, the springs of his process, which, without destroying his value as a slave, will debase and crush him as a rational being—you may do this, and the idea that he was born to be free will survive it all. It is allied to his hope of immortality—it is the ethereal part of his nature, which oppression cannot reach—it is a torch hit up in his soul by the hand of the Deity, and sever meant to be extinguished by the hand of man. If gentiemen do not see nor feel the evil of slavery whilst this Federal Union lasts, they will see and feel it when it is gone; they will see and seel it when it is gone; they will see and seel it when it is gone; they will see and suffer it then, in a magnitude of desolating power, to which the 'pestilence that walketh at nooday' would be a blessing—to which the malaria that is now threatening extinction to the 'Eternal City,' as the proud one of the Pontiffs and the Cessars is called, would be as refreshing and as balmy as the first breath of spring to the chamber of disease."

as the first breath of spring to the chamber of disease."

This language, and a great deal more equally powerful, which we might quote, delivered in the slave region, almost on the spot where Brown began his outbreak, was calculated to fire his imagination and quicken his incendiary purposes. Nothing has ever been said by Garrison or Wendell Philips more trenchant and aggressive: the mild phrases of Mr. Seward, in regard to the inevitable conflict which must always exist between the principles of human freedom and bondage, are the most dulet strains in comparison with them; and if Brown nurused his fatal zeal by anything besides his own rancor and fanaticism, he probably preferred the strong meat of the Virginia Convention to the milk and water diet of our Northern oratory.

"Does not the evil (Slavery) exist? Is it not increasing? Does not every day give it permanency and force? Is it not rising like a heavy and portentous cloud above the horizon, extending its deep and sable volumes athwart the aky, and gathering in its impenetrable folds the active materials of elemental war? And yet, shall we be requested to close our eyes to the danger, and without an effort—without even an inquiry—to yield to the impulses of a Cark and withering despair? Sir, is this manly legislation? Is it ocrrect—is it honest legislation? Is it acting with that fidelity to our constituents which their ing despair? Sir, is time anny segmenton? In its correct—as it honest legislation? Is it acting with that idelity to our constituents which their sacred interest requires?

"Sir, if this evil, great as it is, was even stationary—if the worthy gentleman from Mecklenburg and Brunswick (Mr. Gholson) could give us any assurance that it would not increase until it reaches a point which it is horrible to contemplate—I might be induced to acquiesce in the course which their pathetic appeals suggest. But, when they know it is otherwise—when they know that each successive billow is detracting from the small space of ground left between us and the angry ocean chafing at our feet—when they know that each successive billow is detracting from the small space of ground left between us and the angry ocean chafing at our feet—how can they advise us—how can they advise us—how can they advise us—how can they advise their own constituents—to remain still, when the next advancing ware may overwhelm them and us in hopeless ruin and desolution? "Sir, if the gentleman from Mecklenburg was not satisfied when he submitted his resolutions, he must now be convinced that this is one of those questions which no parliamentary advoltness can smother. The spirit of free inquiry is abroad upon the earth; and governments and all the institutions convected with them must be austained, not by any mystical and superstitions reverence for them as existing institutions but as they are ascertained, after a severe scrutiny, to subserve the great ends of popular weal. The same question which is new convulsing Europe to its centre—which is purifying that most gifted country from the despotism which has for many centuries hung over it—is, in a somewhat modified shape, operating upon the present inquiry. As with them, it is asked, Why have we so long tolerated the unequal and oppressive institutions of our country! Why have we suffered ourselves to be ground into dust, that others may be pumpered in latury and ease! Of what use are crowns and hereditary a ical argument from known and admitted premises, he deduced them them as inevitable results. Mr. Faulkner and his comrades in the Legislature were well aware of the nature and bearings of Slavery; they saw that it was inconsistent with the peace and prosperity of their native State; and the felt, with all their expacity of feeling; that unless it was restricted and gradually removed, the old Commonwealth was only "laying up for itself wrath against the day of wrath." And they know now just as they knew then, that an institution so unjust and false carried its own retribution with it, and whether from outside excitement or inherent defect, will sooner or later break over the heads of its defenders. Marinar Ermus, Oct. 94, 1889.

Erchange is exceedingly close at quotations, viz, 1½ per cent premium; and some of the bankers sold for a short time this moraling at 14, under the impression that it would go to the figure, but it was finally agreed to keep it at previous quotations. Sales were made only to customers, and as sparingly as possible. Unless the demand falls off or the supply materially increases, it cannot remain at present prices beyond a day or two.

Currency is plenty for all business purposes, and from the new issues, we meet almost daily, the city banks and the people too well ere many months, have an unwieldly surplus. Just now the manufacturers of "promises to pay" are having a fine chance to "utter" them, and it must be confeased that for the time being they answer a good purpose; but if our merchants and the people generally do not "utter" ground deep and long over their inconvertibility into coin or exchange, a few months hence, we shall be very happily disappointed.
